

APPLY FOR A PEACE FELLOWSHIP THIS SUMMER AND WORK ON THE FRONTLINES FOR SOCIAL JUSTICE!

The Advocacy Project (AP) is looking for graduate students with a passion for social justice to work with AP's community-based partner organizations in the summer of 2018. AP has deployed 294 Peace Fellows since 2003. Check below for this year's openings and programs.

The work: Fellows will help host organizations to publicize their work; support a pilot project for social change; strengthen their organizations; and build their international network. In the process, Fellows will get unique first-hand experience of human rights that will benefit them academically and professionally. All positions are full-time and will last for 10 weeks (June-August) or 6 months (June-December). Fellows will receive a $1,000 stipend, plus $250 for travel and translation where appropriate. All Fellows will attend training in Washington D.C. in May 2018.

Qualifications: AP's fellowship program is geared to graduate students who are studying for a Masters degree, although exceptions can be made. Essential qualifications include experience of working abroad, a knowledge of and interest in IT and social media; a commitment to human rights and advocacy, and an ability to work in a challenging environment. In some locations, a foreign language may be required. There are no geographic or nationality restrictions.

To Apply: The deadline for applying is March 16, 2018. Read more about our job descriptions. To apply, fill out the application here, send in your $25 application fee here, and email your CV and Cover Letter to fellowships@advocacynet.org. When sending in your $25 application fee, click the link provided on this page, which takes you to a donation page for The Advocacy Project. Select your gift amount as 'other' and enter $25. This will be a one-time payment. Choose your method of payment in the 'payment information' section. Finally, in the section that asks if there is a special purpose for your donation, write Fellowship Fee.
